Introduction

Dear Reader,

Hello Other is a biography, narrated by the main character, Jane. Her story documents extraordinary moments in an ordinary life.

Hello Other is unapologetically candid, because Jane is a survivor. Some of you may at times find her experiences confronting, and aspects of Jane's story could trigger uncomfortable memories and negative emotions. I ask that you take positive action. Please seek the immediate support of a trusted listener, and if necessary to talk with an experienced health professional.

Hello Other is a spiritual story because life is Spirit. Divisions between mind and body are arbitrary, as Jane soon discovers. Beyond discovery, the answers to life's big questions are revealed incrementally. As her destiny unfolds, Jane must reconcile her own soul progress and her ability to recognise other souls and soulmates with whom her journey is aligned.

Nature endows us with the experience of life. Life allows us to exercise our free will. In every given moment we have the power to awaken, love, create, and share. Alternatively, we can exert our power to deny, hate, segregate, and destroy. Learning through experience Jane steadily expands her own field of awareness, further developing her acuity for co-creation in her everyday life.

My intention is that Jane's story will inspire others who may not yet be at peace with the past to take positive steps towards releasing unresolved trauma.

I hope that you enjoy reading about Jane's endeavours as much as I am enjoying writing her story.

With Love and Gratitude,

S C Dinsdale.

PROLOGUE

Who stole my thunder?

***

'Twas the voice of reason

For the minds of man

To deny nature

Is a grave misdeed

Of biblical proportion

An error of omission

The cycles of life

All journeys lead home

In the Aquarian age Aries

Descends as Libra rises

The first to arrive

Is the last to leave

To know an other

Is to know one Self

All great love stories

End at the beginning
